205 The London Game. This is a most elaborate and carefully prepared game. It is played upon a finely colored picture map of London, giving at a glance a most interesting idea of that great city, showing all the famous monuments, streets, etc., etc. A letter and a key is used to direct the players in the game. Size 17x20 inches $24 00

216 Parlor Golf. Very realistic. Played with balls which cannot harm furniture. Also adapted for outdoor use. It is undoubtedly the best parlor golf game on the market. The golf strokes are made in imitation of the regular clubs, with steel heads. The handle is made in two parts which join together securely and neatly by a brass ferrule. The holes are made of steel, attractively painted. The set consists of 2 clubs, 3 holes, and 4 balls. The game can be used during unfavorable weather for the outdoor game in clubs and private houses, and is deservedly popular. Size 20x8½ inches 24 00

Duplicates Typewriting Quickly

Write your original on a stencil sheet—just as you write a letter. Put the stencil on this mimeograph, feed the paper and turn the crank. All the rest is automatic. You can make fifty copies per minute—seventy when you are used to it.

The EDISON OSCILLATING MIMEOGRAPH

is a new type of the mimeograph. It picks up the sheet, holds it while printing, puts it in the box when done. Anything that can be typewritten, can be duplicated indefinitely. Nearly every office has a mimeograph now. Those who have an old style will see the advantage of this new one. Those who have none should send for our book. Anybody who issues circular information needs an Oscillating Mimeograph.

Snap HOOK-EYE The 20th Century Hook

SNAP HOOK & EYE

Snap HOOK-EYE The 20th Century Hook

It closes by a touch, and you hear it close. These are two strong points bear them in mind.

With the old-fashioned hook you grope about vainly for a while and finally catch something—you don't know exactly what. It may by some good fortune be the eye, but it is just as likely to be the dress or the trimming, through which it will tear, leaving your garment both unfastened and marred. With the SNAP HOOK AND EYE there is nothing of this kind; all that is needed is a touch in the right place—and you know it is the right place because you hear the click of the tiny steel spring. Made in sizes 3 and 4.

If your dealer does not keep them, send 10 cents for a sample card. Say whether white or black.

They are reached from all directions over the Danville Division of the Southern Railway Twenty-five dollars will be the price of a round-trip ticket from Chicago to Colorado on July 1 to 9, inclusive. Limit for return, October 31.

The rate from St. Louis on these days will be $21.00 and through tickets will be sold from eastern points at prices based on these low figures. At other times this summer the rates to Colorado will be only a little bit higher than these.

WE ARE doing everything possible this year, by making unusually low ticket rates, and running unusually fast and comfortable trains, to make it convenient and not too expensive for people of moderate means to spend their vacation in the Colorado mountains. There is no country in the world like Colorado for invalids and others in search of rest and pleasure. The pure, dry climate has the most astonishing permanent effect on the health and spirits of visitors, and especially is this so in the case of those from that part of the country near to the level of the sea.

MY NEW BOOK FOR 1901

contains designs which are [illegible] and [illegible] and pleasing to people of taste. I have planned unique houses for every State in the country and my success is due to the fact that while my houses are practical and convenient, the designs both interior and exterior are untrammeled by precedent and imitations of no one.

If you are in search of some one who will tell you you can build a large, fine house for little money—then search further. But if you want practical, beautiful plans and—well reasonably accurate estimates for really new designs in houses, I can be of service to you. MY ALTERATIONS of Old Houses are very successful; both in beauty of design and economy of construction.

I will get up entirely new designs for you. I also publish these books:

PICTURESQUE COTTAGES (new 1901 edition) containing [illegible] from $ [illegible] to $ [illegible]. Price by mail, $1 00.

PICTURESQUE HOUSES. Designs for houses from $7000 to $15,000. Price by mail, $1 00.

GREATER THAN YOSEMITE

LAST summer an exploration party crossed a low divide, a few miles north of Field Station, British Columbia, and found a valley —walled in by glaciers and guarded by peaks 11,000 feet high—in which are the Takakkaw and Twin Falls, the one 1400 feet and the other 1200 feet.

The discoverer of this wonderland says:

"THIS MAGNIFICENT SCENERY, SO LONG UNKNOWN AND HIDDEN, SHOULD NO MORE BE NEGLECTED. NO VISITOR WILL EVER RETURN DISAPPOINTED."

EIGHT EXPERIENCED SWISS GUIDES are stationed at BANFF, LAKE LOUISE, FIELD, and GLACIER, so that climbs and explorations may be engaged in safely by those availing themselves of the arrangements made by the

A few weeks in Colorado next summer will do you more good than a barrel of medicine.

WE issue a handsome little book about Colorado, which is more entertaining and informative than anything on the subject yet published. It is full of interesting illustrations and contains an excellent topographical map of the State. It can be had by sending six cents in postage to the address below.

Burlington Route

Excellent hotels, perfect climate and wonderful mountain scenery make Colorado the ideal health and pleasure resort.

Colorado is not far away. We run "one night on the road" trains, luxuriously equipped, from both Chicago and St. Louis. Comfortable library smoking cars and dining cars à la carte make the trip seem very short. Then during the summer months tourist tickets are sold at greatly reduced rates, so the expense is not great.

One Horse Does the work of two

There is a way to reduce by just half the draft on your animal, whether you drive carriage, wagon or dray. It is done by the Timken Roller Bearing Axle.

It operates on rollers, and the absolute freedom from friction makes oiling unnecessary, except twice a year to keep the bearings from rusting. Timken Axles are easily applied to any vehicle, old or new.

Our booklet "Solving the Horse" tells how the Timken Axle reduces the draft on animals per cent. shows how the wheel runs with it and tells why the Timken Axle has a long maintenance how 8 pounds starts two tons on a wagon equipped with the Timken Axle while pounds will start only pounds on a wagon with the ordinary axle. It is interesting and instructive information in the owner of any vehicle, and will be sent to you if you buy the Timken Axle or not. Send for booklet. It is FREE.

One Horse Does the work of two

There is a way to reduce by just half the draft on your animal, whether you drive carriage, wagon or dray. It is done by the Timken Roller Bearing Axle.

It operates on rollers, and the absolute freedom from friction makes oiling unnecessary, except twice a year to keep the bearings from rusting. Timken Axles are easily applied to any vehicle, old or new.

Our booklet "Saving the Horse" tells how the Timken Axle reduces the draft on the horse 50 per cent, shows how the wheel runs seven minutes on the Timken Axle before losing its momentum—how 8 pounds starts two tons on a wagon equipped with the Timken Axle while it requires 48 pounds to start same load on a wagon with the ordinary axle. Gives interesting and valuable information to the owner or driver of buggy, carriage or heavy wagon. Whether you buy the Timken Axle or not send for the booklet—it is FREE

Wasteful Office Work

Merchants who buy with discretion and sell largely at fair advances over cost, at the end of the year find that their individual profits are small — that they hardly have made the interest on their invested capital and moderate salaries for themselves. They feel that there is an immense amount of detail connected with their business, making the office work cumbersome, intricate and expensive, which might be lessened, but how to simplify it they do not know.

Baker-Vawter Business Systems are the result of examination of office work in almost every line of trade and can be adapted to any business, saving both time and money.

Baker-Vawter Company's accountants guided by practical experience and common sense, will analyze your business, devise and install a simple and perfect system at a reasonable charge, which will save its cost many times. As often as required competent auditors will make examinations and reports.

Please write for pamphlet "General Expense" explaining Baker-Vawter Business Systems in detail.

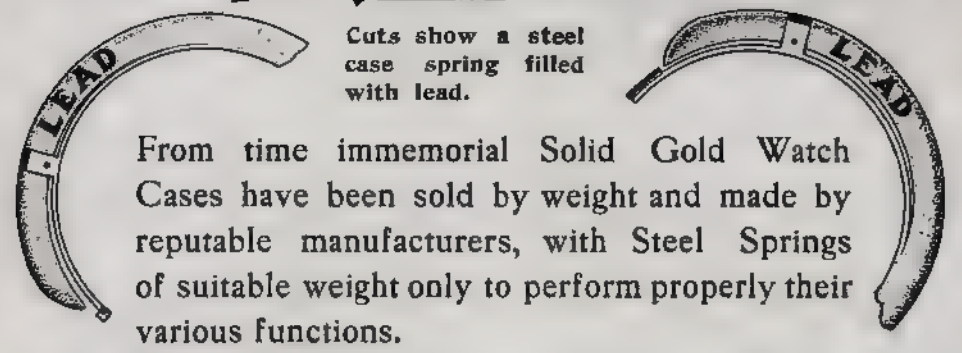
Gold Watch Cases stuffed with Lead

Perhaps you bought one



Cuts show a steel case spring filled with lead.

From time immemorial Solid Gold Watch Cases have been sold by weight and made by reputable manufacturers, with Steel Springs of suitable weight only to perform properly their various functions.

The specific gravity of lead is nearly fifty per cent. greater than steel, therefore certain unscrupulous manufacturers use very little steel for their case springs and as much lead as possible, thus producing watch cases the center of which is completely filled with lead, so much so that nearly one half of the total weight of the case is composed of base metal.

This same class of manufacturers also use a stamp upon their cases reading, "Warranted U. S. Assay" with the desire to make the public suppose that the "U. S. Assay Office" has something to do with their manufacture.

If you have bought a solid gold watch and think you have been deceived, write us for full particulars.

Take a Kodak with You.

Made of aluminum and covered with the finest seal grain leather, the Folding Pocket Kodaks are as rich and dainty as a lady's purse, and are hardly heavier, yet they withstand the rough usage of travel and changes of climate far better than any heavy camera.

Carried in the hand, in a case, or in a shopping bag, they are convenient and inconspicuous. Take a Kodak with you.

The Folding Pocket Kodaks are fitted with superb lenses and have the Eastman automatic shutters for snap-shots or time exposures, have sets of three stops, brilliant finders and load in daylight with film cartridges for two, six or twelve exposures. They combine the smallest bulk and least weight, with simplicity, and the highest excellence in camera construction.

Duplicates Typewriting Quickly

Write your original on a stencil sheet—just as you write a letter. Put the stencil on this mimeograph, feed the paper and turn the crank. All the rest is automatic. You can make fifty copies per minute—seventy when you are used to it.

The EDISON OSCILLATING MIMEOGRAPH

is a new type of the mimeograph. It picks up the sheet, holds it while printing, puts it in the box when done. Anything that can be typewritten, can be duplicated indefinitely. Nearly every office has a mimeograph now. Those who have an old style will see the advantage of this new one. Those who have none should send for our book. Anybody who issues circular information needs an Oscillating Mimeograph.

Snap HOOK AND EYE The 20th Century Hook

SNAP HOOK & EYE

Snap HOOK AND EYE The 20th Century Hook

It closes by a touch, and you hear it close. These are two strong points—bear them in mind.

With the old-fashioned hook you grope about vainly for a while and finally catch something—you don't know exactly what. It may by some good fortune be the eye, but it is just as likely to be the dress or the trimming, through which it will tear, leaving your garment both unfastened and marred. With the SNAP HOOK AND EYE there is nothing of this kind; all that is needed is a touch in the right place and you know it is the right place because you hear the click of the tiny steel spring. Made in sizes 3 and 4.

If your dealer does not keep them, send 10 cents for a sample card. Say whether white or black.

Majestic

Malleable Iron and Steel

t, perfect product of our 30 years' experience as range makers. This range works equally well with hard or soft coal or wood and not all the water you need almost instantly, and save you its cost the first year in reduction of fuel expense. It is not to go with ashes or clinkers, nor blow smoke and soot to soil and paint the kitchen. It will not crack or break, thus saving expense and annoyance. Made of the very best grade of malleable iron, there is as much difference in the quality of malleable iron as there is in different woods. Fires lined with asbestos, entire range riveted (not bolted) and tight and rust tight.

Majestic Ranges

are also made in combination for wood, coal and gas, with or without water connections, in a variety of styles, sizes and prices to meet any need. Our booklet, 'A Model Kitchen,' sent free for the asking, will tell you all about Majestic Ranges and Malleable Iron, and how to arrange a kitchen to get best results from a range. DON'T BUY A RANGE until you have read this book. Two Million people are using the Majestic Range. It is not the first cost of a range that should be considered—it is the working qualities and lasting qualities. Majestic Ranges outwork and outlast steel ranges.

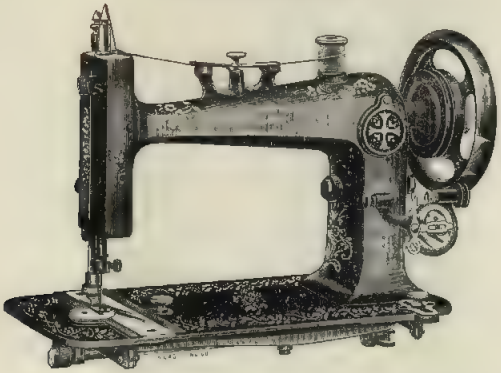
Sewing Machines.



Corona Sewing Machines.

The Corona Sewing Machine is one possessing great merit. The combination embodied in its construction is the result of twenty-five years' experience in manufacturing and selling Sewing Machines. It possesses all modern improvements, and its mechanical construction is such that in it are combined simplicity with great strength, thus insuring ease of running, durability and making it almost impossible for the machine to get out of order. We can justly claim that, in its mechanical principles, finish and appearance, it is the Acme of Perfection.

It has an Eccentric Movement; the motion of the shuttle and feed is taken from an eccentric on the main shaft. The shuttle travels in a circular course and the machine makes what is known as a double lock stitch, the two threads being locked together in the center of the goods, forming a stitch which appears the same on both sides. The upper thread is drawn into position directly from the spool without passing through any holes until the eye of the needle is reached. The following is a detailed description of the machine.

The feed is a double, four-motion drop feed, and has no springs; it always starts from the needle on a long or short stitch.

The length of the stitch is regulated by a thumb-screw on the upright portion of the arm and directly in front of the operator. It will make a very long or short stitch.

The take-up is adjustable, controlling the thread perfectly on all grades of work, and requires no change in sewing heavy goods.

The tension on both threads is easily controlled. In its practical working it has all the merits claimed for an automatic tension. The tension liberator is of a new design and enables the operator to remove the work from the machine without danger of breaking or bending the needle.

The needle-bar is round, made of hardened steel, and finely finished. It runs in hardened steel bushings, packed above and below with felt, which absorbs oil enough to lubricate the part without any danger of running down upon and soiling the work

The shuttle is a marvel of simplicity, is strictly self threading, carries a very large bobbin, and is made of the finest steel, tempered, polished and plated, and is cylindrical in form.

The automatic bobbin-winder is a wonderful improvement and is so positive and reliable in its action that an imperfectly wound bobbin is impossible.

The arm is high and correspondingly long, and as shown in the illustrations gives plenty of room for handling all kinds of work without being cumbersome or awkward in appearance; the clear space underneath it is 5½ by 9 inches.

The attachments, supplied without extra charge, are of the latest design, interchangeable, and are made throughout of the best steel polished and nickel-plated, and there is not a particle of brass or other soft metal, nor a single soldered joint about them. They consist of Ruffler, Tucker, Binder, Braider Foot, Under Braider Slide Plate, Shirring Slide Plate, four Hemmers of assorted widths, Quilter, Thread Cutter, Foot Hemmer

The accessories include twelve Needles, six Bobbins, Oil Can, large and small Screw Drivers, Sewing Guide, Guide Screw, Certificate of Warranty (good for five years), and elaborately illustrated Instruction Book.

Euclid Sewing Machines.

There is a demand for a good, low-priced machine that is thoroughly practical and which embodies in its makeup all of the necessary and practical features of a first-class, high-grade machine, but which at the same time is not finished so elaborately or furnished with such an expensive equipment, which add greatly to the cost, but not to the utility of the machine. We have tried to secure a sewing machine, the sewing qualities of which have not been sacrificed in the least. The result is our Euclid.

It makes what is known as the double lock stitch, by using two threads, which are locked together in the center of the goods, forming a stitch presenting the same appearance on both the upper and lower sides of the goods.

The operation of threading the machine is very simple as the upper thread is drawn from the spool and passed through the upper tension, take up, etc., without the slightest difficulty, it not being necessary to thread through any hole until the eye of the needle is reached.

THE PASSING OF NIAGARA

BY MARY B. HARTT

TWO centuries and more ago, when Father Hennepin first came upon the "grand sault" of Niagara, it was set in a green solitude. Eagles, nesting in the high cedar-tops, circled screaming through the mists of the "Thunder of Waters." And only the Red Man saw and wondered.

Time has changed all that. Gone are the mighty cedars, and gone with them the strong-winged eagles. In place of the cedar has sprung up the telegraph-pole. In place of the screaming eagle has come the shrieking trolley-wire. In place of the solitary Red Man have come scurrying hordes of pale-faced picnickers. The sardine has entered Paradise.

But why complain? We move, in fine. And if we have swept away the poetry of the natural, have we not more than replaced it by the wordless poetry of a machine age? Come and see. Yonder is the Queen's—alas, no!—the King's Dominion. Where that smooth plain of greensward stretches along the top of the Canadian bluff, there was once a dense, luxuriant cedar-swamp. Mark you now the toy trolleys crawling from one glaring white post to another on the high cliff's brow. So they crawl, through leafy forests down the deep-carved gorge, all the way to Queenstown, and up to the lovely wooded Dufferin Islands lying in a sheltering elbow far up the hurrying river. Rough railway bridges cross the rushing water between these tiny islets, once an inviolate solitude, and till late strung together only by light footbridges.

So Canada. Now come with me across that graceful steel-arched bridge spanning the gorge, and let us, looking back from another country, behold what the Yankee has done with his heritage.

The mist-shrouded arch of the Horseshoe Fall draws our eyes irresistibly upstream. It depends now upon how far into the past we look whether we speak in praise or blame. Going back to the days of La Salle and Hennepin, or even to the opening years of the century just past, we shall miss the giant oaks and the dense thicket of young trees and luxuriant undergrowth which once fringed the river bank and covered what is now Prospect Park. But if, on the other hand, we look back only to the time immediately preceding the opening of the reservation, in 1885, we shall miss, with indescribable exultation, a thousand sordid blemishes of the scene. For the Reservation Commissioners, with the scanty resources at their command, have accomplished landscape miracles. Bath Island, once the site of an obtrusive paper-mill, which thrust its hideous sluiceways and wing-dams into the very heart of the tossing American Rapids, is now a stretch of smooth green turf, generously planted with nursling trees, the metamorphosed place being rechristened "Green Island." Bazaars, curio-shops, and tintype galleries, which had crowded themselves into the very spray of the Falls, overhanging the rapids, and monopolizing, where they did not altogether obscure, the finest views of the river, have been swept away. The river bank above the Falls, for many years disfigured with ice-houses, mills, and unsightly factories, has been cleared, and the shore line restored as far as possible to its natural wooded condition, though not, alas! to any semblance of the glory of its primeval forests. Time alone can reproduce the original beauty of that cruelly mutilated bank. But the Commissioners have given time every opportunity to get to work.

THE "BRIDAL VEIL" BEFORE DISFIGUREMENT

Below the American Fall, one seems to remember, a slender stream of water used to overleap the high cliff wall and dash itself to finest spray before it reached the rocks below. We called it the "Bridal Veil." Innocent though it looked, that film of water was the prophecy of mighty things to come, of wealth to the village of Niagara Falls, of ruin to Niagara's matchless gorge. For that slender stream was the outlet of the canal of the Hydraulic Power Company.

Look now for the innocent Bridal Veil. It has "multiplied itself by the hundred dozen." And alas for the cedar-grown, vine-draped cliff! Under the very shadow of the reservation, not two thousand feet from the plunge of the American Fall, huddles as foul and unsightly a milling village as ever dishonored a river's brink. Flush with the edge of the denuded cliff they stand, flouring-mills, aluminum works, breweries, and whatnot—hulking factories, advertisement-blazoned sheds, shapeless rookeries. Down the discolored face of the cliff run certain exaggerated stovepipes, painted Indian red, called penstocks, and certain toy caricatures of Niagara, contemptible driblets of waste water. On the naked débris-slope at the foot of the bluff, once clothed in the tenderest of mist-fed verdure, crouch two more factories, utilizing over again the water which has already turned the wheels of the mills above.

Instinctively one cries out in indignation, "Why is this allowed?" Allowed? Pray who is to prevent it? The cliff here is outside the jurisdiction of the reservation. Canada, rightly valuing her gorge, extended the line of official protection all the way down to Queenstown. The American Commissioners recommended, it is true, that the bluff as far as the whirlpool become a part of the State park, but, niggardly counsels prevailing, the gorge was abandoned to its fate.

Come, let us take one of these yellow trolleys and see what that fate has been. Fresh from the sight of the Canadian cliff, forest-crowned, and softly wooded to the very water's edge, we are scarcely prepared to relish the contrast between the Canadian and the American sides of the gorge. For, once as richly clothed as its vis-à-vis, the American cliff, where it is not wholly bald, has a ragged and moth-eaten appearance, the reverse of luxuriant. The forests have been torn from its summit for many a mile downstream; and it makes the matter no better to reflect that a mile strip of this bluff belongs to the Hydraulic Power Company, and that time will surely see it converted into a manufacturing district. From a point a little below the unbeautiful town of Suspension Bridge, a long, slanting line cuts athwart the steep face of the cliff from its summit to the water's edge. That is the trolley-track of the Gorge Railway. Certainly it adds nothing to the beauty of the bluff, and one has an uncomfortable suspicion that the building of that road may have been in large measure responsible for the nakedness of the cliff. Not altogether responsible, however, for quite obviously there have been landslides. Whether or not landslides have been more frequent since the road disturbed the bank it may be rash to inquire. In any case, we might forgive much to the Gorge Railway for the sake of the marvelous views it makes possible. What we cannot forgive is the gratuitous insult of the vast, glaring signboard stretched on the perpendicular bank, down which letters of heroic size go marching Japanese fashion into the gorge—GORGE ROAD. That style of advertising deserves to react unfavorably upon its perpetrators.

If we permit the trolley which brings us back up the gorge to carry us on to Chippewa, we shall have seen the last of Yankee outrages upon the river. For Chippewa, as well as the upper end of Goat Island, commands a view of the river above the American Rapids. It is not a beautiful view. Tall red chimneys rise over a flourishing colony of low red factories, and trailing clouds of soot stain the sky and the smooth reflecting surface of the river. That is the Upper Power Plant, with attendant factories, which occupies the site of the old historic Fort Schlosser, dating from 1762, and the still older French fort of Little Niagara.

So much for the desecration of the scenery of Niagara. Purely practical people, I know, are a bit contemptuous of such protests as mine, regarding the æsthetic loss of the power plants as more than offset by the commercial gain. "If you will have an omelet," say they (meaning thereby, if you will have electric power), "you must break some eggs." That might, perhaps, be excellent reasoning had not the State already invested some two and a half millions of dollars in Niagara for purely æsthetic purposes.

But be that as it may. The point which next demands our attention is strictly a practical one. If it is worth while to have a waterfall at all (and the State of New York would seem to stand committed to that position), then it is manifestly desirable to have water enough to go over the falls. Yet that is the precise point which the Legislature at Albany appears to have overlooked. For since 1886 it has been busily granting to all who asked practically unlimited right to divert the waters of the Niagara River above the Falls. Seven power companies have been organized since that date: The Niagara Falls Power Company, with the right to divert water sufficient to produce two hundred thousand horse-power, or 7,719,360 gallons per minute, or six per cent. of the total amount going over the Falls; the Lockport Water Supply Company, with the right to supply unlimited water to the city of Lockport and any town or village in Niagara County: the Niagara County Irrigation and Water Supply Company, with right to supply unlimited water to Lewiston and other cities and villages in the towns of Niagara, Lewiston, and Porter; the Lewiston Water Supply Company, amount unlimited; the Buffalo and Niagara Power Company, with the right to take unlimited water for domestic, sanitary, commercial, manufacturing, and agricultural purposes; the Model Town Company, with the right to divert by canal from La Salle an unlimited amount of water; and the Niagara, Lockport, and Ontario Power Company, authorized to supply water to Lockport and other villages and cities in Niagara, Erie, and Ontario Counties. And all these amazing privileges the open handed State has dispensed without exacting so much as a penny in compensation for the enormously valuable franchises. It is no fault of the State Legislature that, for lack of capital or enterprise, some of these companies have allowed their charters to lapse, while others have been bought up by the Niagara Falls Power Company, so that but one company is in actual operation to-day—one, that is, besides the old Hydraulic Power Company, established in 1862, which originally held no grant from the State. In 1897, however, the thoughtful Legislature confirmed the claims of this company, thus intrenching behind impregnable rights that wretched milling village beside the Falls.

These two companies are at present taking from the Niagara River seven million three hundred thousand odd gallons of water per minute, or about six per cent. of the total flow over the Falls. When the Upper Company have exhausted their present limit, nine per cent. of the river's water will have been turned aside before it reaches the Falls.

And the effect on the Falls? Superficial observers readily convince themselves that there has been a distinctly noticeable decline in the volume of the American Fall. Experts, however, juggling with mean depths, velocities, and percentages, assure us that the diversion of water into the power tunnels and canals has not reduced the depth of the crest of the fall to an extent appreciable to the eye. And yet the superficial observers are right, too. The river is low, and in times of drought or unfavorable winds a phenomenally small amount of water goes over the American Fall. Proof of these lamentable facts are not wanting. For several years the lovely little fall between Goat Island and the first of the Sisters, known as the Hermit's Cascade, has been so nearly dry that last year it was necessary to deepen the channel above the cascade to restore the old volume of water and the original beauty of the fall. Furthermore, within the last few years alterations in the dock of the "Maid of the Mist" have been necessary to enable her to land her passengers when the river is low. During a heavy gale last October, laden vessels were unable to make their piers at Tonawanda, so low was the water, while at Niagara bare rocks showed through the breakers of the American Rapids.

Expert calculations forbidding us to lay all this at the door of the power companies, we must look further for an explanation. Six hundred miles further it appears; for the foe of Niagara is, if I mistake not, the Chicago Main Drainage Canal. Nor am I unsupported by expert testimony in this matter. Mr. Willis Moore, of the United States Weather Bureau, at the close of his official tour of the Great Lakes, declared emphatically that the effect of the opening of the Drainage Canal had been, not, as so often said, to lower the level of the lakes, but to diminish the amount of water going over Niagara Falls.

The thing is simple enough when you think of it. Picture to yourself the four upper lakes, which are practically on the

GLOUCESTER HARBOR

GLOUCESTER: THE FISHING CITY

BY LILLIAN W. BETTS

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY CLIFTON JOHNSON

A NEW background must be provided the short story writer who has made the fisherman and his environment the theme of his story, the Atlantic seacoast the stage for his actors. A less romantic background than Cape Ann at the present day could not be found. Miles of her rugged coast and beautiful indented bays are in the possession of her fishery interests. Storehouses, smoke-houses, lofts for the preparing of salt fish, and wharfs represent millions in plants that wait on the coming and going of the fishing fleets. Quarries with derricks and guys from water-edge to peak of miles of her rugged coast, with railroads and wharfs and crushers, the clipping and chipping of hundreds of hammers, tell of millions more in possession of another stretch of her coasts. Of the courage and tenacity of the Anglo-Saxon blood in keeping its grip on this rocky Cape, a walk through the streets of Gloucester furnishes hourly evidence. Here very modern houses are perched on terraces, built on side-hills, while the contours of her streets seem to have followed the outline of the boulders her houses must have displaced. Few of her old houses remain, but of these many are still in the possession of the heirs of the original owners. At first glance Gloucester seems like a new, a very new, city, in spite of the records which show her first settlement to have been made in 1623. The reason for this is that her growth was very slow until 1875, since which year it has been phenomenal. Devastating fires having made much rebuilding necessary, the impression of newness is strong.

It is interesting to trace the evolution of the characteristic industry of Gloucester. While the first settlement was for the distinct purpose of establishing fishing-grounds, it was the coast of Maine, not Massachusetts, that was the field and the haven sought. The master did not succeed on the Maine coast, and he decided it "good to pass into Massachusetts Bay, to try whether that would yield him any." Evidently it did, for he sailed for Spain with his cargo, leaving a company of men behind him. Gloucester has passed through many industrial and commercial phases. Her first settlers took to agriculture in spite of her rocky land and their first purpose. In 1727 many of her people emigrated to Salem, because the farming land was overcrowded. The next commercial and industrial evolution was the cutting and shipping of wood in her own vessels built in her own harbors. This, in the nature of things, on the limited area, was of short-lived duration. The plant, the vessels, remained, and must be turned to use. The ocean lay before the town, and by an easy change the vessels were turned into fishing-vessels, with more or less success, principally less; for in 1840 the industry was at a low ebb, so low as barely to afford a living to the people of the town, so poor as to hold no inducement to outsiders to settle. For years the increase in the population of Gloucester was a natural increase, barely affected by the coming of new people. It was this which preserved its characteristics; the marriages were among the original families, producing a sturdy race physically and morally—a race of patriots. From the beginning of her history every call for military service has found the men of Gloucester eager and ready to respond. The Revolution ruined her fishing industry. Her vessels hunted the seas to harass and worry the British, and the story of her losses on land and water proves the stuff of which her people were made. The war of 1812, the Civil War, both found Gloucester alert to meet the needs of the Nation. Poverty never deterred her, nor the limited number of men who were left to protect and develop her industry. Every hamlet in her boundaries has its monument to the men who have died in the country's service.

The harbor of Gloucester at one time was the busy shipping center of a foreign trade which, in its turn, left that harbor as the lumber trade had left it. To-day she has her India Square, the center of residence of retired captains, the distinctive mark of her age and early importance.

Boat-building has been a leading industry from her earliest days. One of her first settlers was said to have built a ship of six hundred tons before he left England. The schooner was born in Gloucester. As the first model glided from the stocks to the water, a boatman exclaimed, "See how she scoons!" "A schooner let her be," was her maker's comment. Not the least of Gloucester's renown is that schooners and Universalism in this country were both born on the cape to which she has now given her name, for Pigeon Cove, Annisquam, and all the rest of the far-famed shore are part of the incorporated city of Gloucester, a name given by its first settlers, most of whom, it is said, came from Gloucester, England. The two cities have exchanged portraits. The picture of the Gloucester in the New World hangs in the council chamber of the old Gloucester, while a picture of Old World Gloucester hangs in the Mayor's room of the New World Gloucester, the latter bearing this inscription: "For it is certain that Apollo promises that in a new clime there shall be another Salamis." This painting was a gift of the Member of Parliament from Gloucester, 1869, in recognition of courtesies extended to his son in the New World Gloucester.

The prosperity of Gloucester dates from 1860. The increased demand for fish as a food started a new activity in this industry, which had heretofore lived but did not thrive. Improved boats, fishing-gear, better knowledge of the habits of fish, discovery of better fishing-grounds, all contributed to the result. The tide had turned for Gloucester, and she grasped her opportunity. The new knowledge drew her men into larger fields involving larger risks, and she stands to-day mistress of the field, the queen of the fishing industries in this country.

DAUGHTERS OF THE QUARRY—LITTLE FINNS

The fishing in Gloucester has passed through many changes. There are men who remember when fishing was a matter of going out but a short distance and catching every day all that a man could care for. As the years went on, a good haul or catch near shore was a rarer and rarer occurrence. The introduction of trawl-fishing rapidly increased the fishing area. As the fishing-ground was found further off shore, the boats grew larger; the man of money was able to own a share in many boats; the crews became, as time went on, laborers who shared in the results of their own labor. This method still prevails. The men have contracts, and share equally in the profits—a more satisfactory basis than the old one of taking out the tongues of the cods to have them counted at the end of the day's labor, or marking each halibut with a man's private mark and counting these as a man's earnings, subject to cost specified. The difference in each day's return to each man of the crew varied, and while this method of tally prevailed for a long period, it was not, on the whole, considered fair. Profit-sharing is the present practice. The basis may be that one-half of the gross catch or "fare" goes to the vessel; from the other half expenses are deducted, and the balance, in which the vessel has again a share, is divided. Sometimes the basis is a fifth; whatever the basis, the vessel gets her assignment first on the gross, then one share of the net earnings, sharing costs equally with the crew. The shore fishing is still carried on. There are boats that leave and return in a day—a very small part of the whole number in the harbor. There are vessels that go for two or three days; and when the season is a good one, this branch of industry is very profitable. The two and three weeks' trips vary greatly in the returns. The Banks trips have called in the capitalist. The boats and equipment for this long-distance fishing are expensive; the stores must be provided in bulk, and there must be provision for the family of the fisherman while he is gone. Often when his share of the expenses of the trip, food, salt, etc., and the support of his family during his absence, are deducted, his balance is very small, and he must at once reship for another cruise.

AT WORK IN A CAPE ANN QUARRY

THE FISH-CLEANERS

The trawl and seine have, in some branches of fishing and on some grounds, entirely displaced the hook and line. Mackerel-fishing has appeared and disappeared on the eastern Atlantic coast. As early as 1657 mackerel was an article of commerce. In 1692 the General Court forbade the catching of mackerel in nets or seines, or their use, except when fresh, before July 1. Until 1821 the catch was small, but since that time, with varying seasons, mackerel-fishing has remained an important part of the fishery interests of Gloucester. There are men in the business in Gloucester who say that some measure of protection will yet have to be given all kinds of fish on our Atlantic coast. This prophecy is made, although all agree that the greatest change in the industry has come with the birth of the century. The spring of 1900 saw the first fishing-boat equipped with auxiliary power, and witnessed her complete success. Her earnings were the largest ever made in a season by one boat. One man explained it: "There was the fish, millions of them, and not a breath to move a boat. Chug-a-chug, away she went, and scooped 'em in; we looked on."

All agree that fishing has entered on a new era, and the day of sails as entire dependence for long-distance fishing is going. Some men say that this will change the working fisherman's relations; that the far greater cost of the boat and the cost of running must, in the nature of things, make the question of wages prominent, and the end will be a reduction in the fisherman's earnings. The opposite view is taken by many, as the men worked on shares on the new boat this year, and earned more than the men on the sailboats. The new motive-power must be other than steam. The boats need all their space for fish; carrying coal is out of the question. The inventive genius of the country will solve the problem of generating a power from fuel, small in bulk, inexpensive, quick, and powerful. The fuel used in the new boat is gasoline. The cruises vary in their success; the years' records vary greatly, but the Gloucester of to-day tells the story of success in spite of fluctuations. The years show a steady gain. There is now a market always open. Refrigerated cars carry the product of the cruise west and south. When this demand is met, right at the docks are lofts and smoke-houses ready for the fish, fresh or salt, as it has been for the fisherman's interest to deliver it.

Here invention and chemistry have revolutionized the business. Labor, the chief factor in the curing of fish, is being displaced by machinery in one direction and called in in another. Chemistry has turned all the waste into a valuable product; the skin of the cod is now turned into a patented coffee settler; and a fertilizer is the product of the scraps cast aside in making the preparations for the table, which are constantly growing more dainty and attractive. This department of the business gives employment to hundreds of boys, girls, young women, and men.

Anything less like a fishing hamlet than the Gloucester of to-day could not be conceived. A city of paved streets, electric cars, free postal collection and delivery, electric lights, and the telephone, and that last mark of commercial greatness, a foreign population and consequent social problems—that is the Gloucester of to-day. Previous to 1850 there were very few foreign-born people on the whole Cape. To-day there is an Irish population owning a handsome Roman Catholic church of stone, a rectory, and a library in stone and brick, a parochial school, and several small churches. A Roman Catholic church for the Portuguese is in process of finishing in the center of the Portuguese section. These people are a most interesting part of the population. The men are the crews of the fishing-vessels, which are for the most part owned and sailed by the natives of Gloucester, but rarely manned by them. Many of these Portuguese own their own houses, while others have erected three and four-storied houses occupied by four and more families. These are the modern fisherman's "huts." From many of the windows no glimpse of the sea is given. The storm rages, the waves beat, and the fog enwraps the Cape, but the fisherman's wife cannot stand on the shore and peer out for the vessel she knows so well, for the shore is covered with storehouses, smoke-houses, lofts for drying fish. At night she does not sit alone in terror, nor does she go in a driving storm to her neighbor's for comfort or to comfort, for her neighbor is upstairs, downstairs, across the hall, at her door. Every American in Gloucester speaks well of these people. "The women are beautiful needlewomen; they stay closer in their homes than the women of any other nation," is the testimony of the women of Gloucester. The streets of houses, the interests in vessels, the mercantile establishments in Portuguese possession, are the evidences of their thrift and industry. The Sunday-school, numbering about one hundred and fifty when visited, was entirely under the control of young girls not more than eighteen, some barely fifteen, yet good order and attention were the rule. The Nova Scotian rarely becomes a permanent resident. He appears in great numbers in the late winter, and returns home in the fall when the herring-fishing begins. Some become capitalists and are part owners of the vessels in which they sail. They make valuable members of the community, and are a large factor in the commercial success of Gloucester.

Another industry is rapidly gaining ground on Cape Ann. Her quarries are carrying her name around the world. This industry has attracted the Scotch and the Finns, especially the latter, who are taking possession of the old houses on the north shore, and building houses to meet their needs. The Finns live by themselves, have their own church, their own entertainment hall, keep their habits and their language, deal with their own

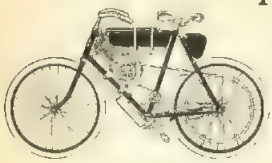
THE MITCHELL MOTOR BICYCLE



Combines in one vehicle all the healthful and pleasurable exercise of a bicycle with all the delights of an automobile. The Mitchell commends itself to all lovers of wheeling, because of its SIMPLICITY—it is easily understood and operated by a novice.

ECONOMY it costs but 1-10 to 1-4 of a cent per mile to operate.
POWER—it takes poor roads, hills, and head winds without rider's aid.
SPEED—it will go as fast as the courage of the rider permits, or as slow as desired.

The Motor on the Mitchell is of our own make and is of sufficient horse-power and speed to do all that the most exacting riders could ask for.

Send for our illustrated catalog that tells all about The Mitchell Motor Bicycle in detail.

Outside of the Vocalion Organ

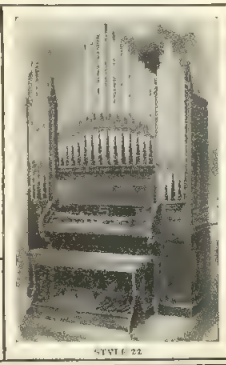
A church organ purchased at a lower price than $2,500 is invariably unsatisfactory

THIS FACT is well known to the majority of organists. If full-scale pipes are used, the number of speaking-stops is so limited as to preclude any variety of tone-color, and if small-scale pipes are used, the quality of tone is wretchedly poor.



STYLE 22

While the Vocalion Organ Company has built, and is building, many large organs, costing as much as $10,000, special study has been given to the smaller-priced instruments, owing to the very great advantage which our system gives us in that field. It is through these instruments that the reputation and success of the company have been achieved.

Smaller organs built on the Vocalion system have the same tonal and mechanical excellence as the larger instruments.

Full catalogue(s) of regular styles, showing designs and specifications, on request. Special designs to meet the requirements of individual church organ-recesses or for private music-rooms gladly submitted.

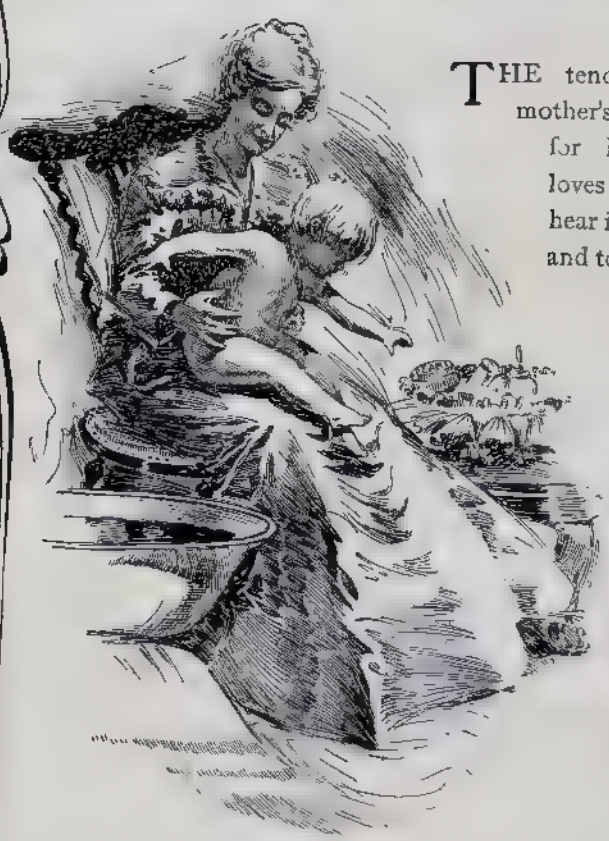
Mothers and Babies.



THE tenderest cord of a mother's affection vibrates for her Baby. She loves to nurse it, to hear its coo and prattle and to care for its needs and comforts. There is nothing the mother enjoys more than Baby. She loves to attend to its frequent baths, and usually the babe seems to enjoy them too. The frolic assists the tonic effect, and Baby comes out of the bath as sweet as sweet can be.

AND not only the baby, but the child, the full grown and the aged, all enjoy the bath; but what soap should be used best suited to the delicate organization of the skin? What soap is freest from the alkali which bites, the freest from impurity? What soap is the most perfect requisite for the health of the human skin, the soap which softens and has a fascinating charm? That soap is Pears', the great English complexion soap, a pure soap that has outlived competition and which is unrivalled in the favor of civilization to-day. It has earned its enduring reputation through a lapse of over 100 years. Mothers and all others not already acquainted with Pears' soap should make no mistake; they should ask for Pears' at their druggists, and be sure they get it.

All rights secured.

O, you can eat "anything," can you! Some day it will be different if you don't look out. Lots of people have talked about "ostrich digestions," then found out that it pays to "eat with reason."

As long as you can get an easily digested food that is appetizingly delicious, and strengthens your constitution, why not eat it?

Pettijohn's Breakfast Food is good to eat—good for the overworked digestive organs—good for the underworked muscles—good for the health. At all Grocers'.

It can be made into a variety of tempting dishes.

The Century Cook-Book

Here is something that is said to "take the place of all other cook-books." The Home Journal calls it "at once the most comprehensive and concise cook-book that we know of." Six hundred pages of the very best and most practical receipts known, with photographs of the dishes described.

Price $2.00.

A special feature is in the illustrations, showing the manner of preparing various kinds of food for cooking, the garnishing of dishes, the decoration of the table, and so forth, and often conveying a suggestion more clearly than could be done by words.

One of the most complete and useful cook-books ever published Central Christian Advocate, St. Louis.

As a cook-book it is simply perfect
Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette New York

She points out what we ought to learn and can learn from the French, that is, how important a factor is garnishing in the preparation of an appetizing meal. In this country especially, cooks do not realize what a large satisfaction, at small cost, is a prettily garnished dish, and it is left to the tables of the wealthy, when it is even more necessary on tables that cannot have beautiful and elegant decorations.—Springfield, Mass., Republican.

A New Novel by the Author of "Richard Carvel"

THE CRISIS

BY

WINSTON CHURCHILL

Specimen Illustration from "The Crisis" (greatly reduced)

"RICHARD CARVEL," the author says, was written as the first of a series of novels which, while in no sense sequels or interrelated in any way, have a distinct historical sequence, as pictures of American life at different periods.

In that book we followed the character of the Cavalier, both in the colonial society of Maryland and the fashionable life of London prior to and during the early days of the American Revolution.

The scenes of "The Crisis" are laid in St. Louis, nearly a century later. The heroine of the story, Virginia Carvel, a great-granddaughter of Richard Carvel, serves to connect the stories in interest. The hero, Stephen Brice, is a young New England lawyer seeking fortune in the Southern city.

Among the many characters in the historical setting of the story we meet Grant, a poor farmer, later, the greatest general in the army; Sherman, president of a small street car line,—later also a conspicuous and picturesque figure in the history of his time, and Lincoln, a struggling country lawyer,—later as President in our greatest national crisis.

"The Crisis" has eight charming illustrations

Snap HOOK AND EYE The 20th Century Hook

SNAP HOOK & EYE

Snap HOOK AND EYE The 20th Century Hook

It closes by a touch, and you hear it close. These are two strong points—bear them in mind.

With the old-fashioned hook you grope about vainly for a while and finally catch something you don't know exactly what. It may by some good fortune be the eye, but it is just as likely to be the dress or the trimming, through which it will tear, leaving your garment both unfastened and marred. With the SNAP HOOK AND EYE there is nothing of this kind; all that is needed is a touch in the right place—and you know it is the right place because you hear the click of the tiny steel spring. Made in sizes 3 and 4.

If your dealer does not keep them, send 10 cents for a sample card. Say whether white or black.

WORCESTER ACADEMY

68th Year Begins Sept. 10, 1901.

Offers Classical and Scientific courses of the highest type, preparing boys for profitable efforts in college, scientific school or business. Scholarship standards are high; the development of the student's powers of observation, concentration and reasoning are valued more than memorizing. Training of eye, hand and brain is effected by laboratory work, manual training, class studies and recitations. The Academy is distinctly Christian in character and in the tone of its students. Physical development by systematic exercise is compulsory, and measurements show decided gains in the physique of students during their stay. Gymnasium, campus, oval and cinder track. Illustrated catalogue, which gives a clear idea of life and work at Worcester Academy, sent free on request.

of school life here is the building of character. We are endeavoring to make unexcelled in the training of boys—to give them that mental, physical and moral equipment which will fit them for the work of the world. Three courses—Scientific, Classical and English. No compromise on liquor, hazing or tobacco. Write for catalogue.

Rev. T. H. LANDON, A.M., Principal.
Major T. D. LANDON, Commandant.

The success and high standing of Montclair Military Academy students in college and commercial life is an indication of the merit of the methods which make it unique among private schools. The gradual lessening of restraint and the increasing of personal liberty is done with sympathetic oversight. Interpreting the boy to himself, showing what he needs to learn in self mastery is considered of equal importance with mental culture. Manliness, obedience and punctuality are developed by a military system which does not tolerate a suggestion of hazing.

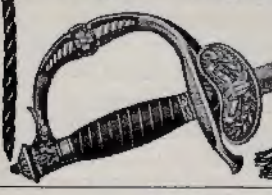
MONTCLAIR MILITARY ACADEMY



Wherever it is possible we ask parents to call and see the school—see how the boys work, play, eat, sleep. Wherever this is not possible, we want the fullest expression of a parent's opinion about his boy. Our opinions are clearly and pointedly expressed in our booklet entitled "Concerning Your Boy and Our School." We have aimed to be perfectly plain in this book. No matter whether your boy can come here or not we will be glad to have you read it. There are many points for parents' consideration, no matter to what school the boy goes. We send with it the catalogue of the school. Address
